

Things between neighbours don't always go smoothly. It's always best to try to resolve any disputes with your neighbours by talking to them and seeing if you can reach a mutual agreement. You can even write them a letter setting out the problem and how you'd like to resolve it. But if those don't work, the next best step is mediation. Citizens Advice Bureau offers a low-cost Community Mediation Service where neighbours in a dispute can come together with trained mediators to negotiate a fair and workable solution for everyone.

What is mediation?

Mediation is an alternative way of resolving a dispute where two parties sit down together and, guided by mediators, negotiate a practical and fair solution to their problem. It gives everyone the opportunity to tell their side of the story, define issues, consider options, and settle on a solution that suits them both. Mediation is guided by two experienced and professionally-qualified mediators. They're impartial and don't give any advice or make any decisions for you; they're only there to help you focus on the best way forward.

If mediation is successful, the result is a mutual agreement that the parties write in their own words. This isn't legally binding, but it can be used as a basis for court applications.

How does mediation work?

Once you and the other party have agreed to mediation, we'll book a separate pre-mediation interview for each of you. This is an opportunity for you to tell your side of the story without the other party there. It's also a good time to ask any questions or raise any issues you're unsure about. The mediator will explain how mediation works so you're fully prepared.

After your pre-mediation interview, we'll book the mediation itself. Both parties have to attend this together and in the presence of our mediators. Citizens Advice Bureau uses a co-mediation model with two mediators to make sure the process is balanced and unbiased.

How much does community mediation cost?

A pre-mediation appointment costs $75 per party. A mediation costs $150 per party.
